

Three of the flags carried by Massachusetts represented the state arms, the spangled flag of blue and "Old Glory." There was the red flag with the white center of the Army of Potomac. The Indiana police band appeared playing the time tried and true "High School Cadets" march, but there were many strangers in such the band did not play as much as it might have done on the musical taste. Massachusetts was four minutes in passing, having several hundred men in line.

From far away Maine came forty or fifty men, and California, at the other side of the continent, followed with twenty-seven. Rhode Island had twenty-four men wearing blue coats and white trousers in the column. "And Lang Syne" was the air the band accompanying New Hampshire's twenty-five men played as it approached the stand. Vermont, with its two dozen men, "hurrahed" for the commander-in-chief, and then went on. About this time the bugler gave "taps," and a forty-five minutes break in the column ensued.

Far away States were appearing after the break. Maryland had about 150 men, while Nebraska, Virginia and North Carolina had comparatively few numbers. Michigan brought down about one hundred Wolverines, Iowa had her famous State band with her. It was the De Moines band, with a twenty-five men and was one of the best that appeared in the line.

At the head of Colorado proudly marched Myron W. Reed, and he was cheered as he was recognized by his old Indianapolis friends. D. V. Bunker, who was in the line, but now of Denver, was in Colorado's line.

Also Laporte band of 21 pieces headed the delegation of sundowner bearers from Kansas. One hundred or more men from this land were they raise "Glorious Day" and "The Stars and Stripes," but now of Denver, was in Colorado's line.

Missouri dipped its standards as it saluted the commander. The Third Regiment Band of Wisconsin, about fifty members, headed the delegation. One woman marched with the band, and the Wisconsin Post, with its hard German veterans, won applause. The Shelbyville Band made a good show in its handsome new uniforms. Missouri was nine minutes in passing.

"Old Knicker" never wavered as he sent his boys down the parade yesterday. Some of the finest looking men in the line were from Kentucky, headed by Col. Albert Scott, a very handsome man himself. The old Kentucky horse was played by the band, and the Kentucky one of the best given by any musical organization in the column. The flag that was planted on the first day of the war, the Fifteenth Kentucky Regiment was carried by a Louisville post. A colored post brought up the rear, one of the characters in line was a bright little chap dressed as "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The Juvenile Fire Corps band of Louisville, caused considerable attention to be directed towards them. Every member of the corps is the son of a veteran, and the Louisville post feel especially proud of the boys.

Washington and Alaska. 17 men in line but, Alaska alone had none. The lone man from Alaska was not found in time to join him in the parade. Sixteen men from Tennessee carried white umbrellas, and Mississippi and Louisiana made a creditable turn out. Many of the members were colored men who carried a rifle and cotton balls on them. Florida was represented by 14. Montana had 25. Texas carried its big steer. General Smith was cheered just as he was a hundred men, Alabama and North Dakota were also represented in the line.

IN THE REVIEWING STAND.

Many distinguished men in the reviewing stand in the center of the Washington-street pavilion contained some of the country's most distinguished men. Ex-President Harrison and two of his Cabinet officers, ex-Secretary, Jeremiah Rankin and ex-Secretary Noble, occupied the most prominent seats in the center of the stand directly facing the line of march. Grouped about these gentlemen on the right side of the stand were Governor Tanner, of Tennessee; Gen. R. B. Heath, of Tennessee; Capt. Jack Crawford, of Tennessee; and Gen. W. H. Harrison, of Tennessee. On the left side of the stand were Gen. Lucius Fairchild, of California; Gen. James T. Tanner, of Tennessee; Gen. R. B. Heath, of Tennessee; Capt. Jack Crawford, of Tennessee; and Gen. W. H. Harrison, of Tennessee.

General Canham and his staff were the first body of men that appeared yesterday morning as harbingers of the great parade of the Grand Army of the Republic. A half hundred strong, mounted on handsome chargers, they trotted up Meridian street to the headquarters at the corner of Seventh street. There many dismounted, and others were sent scurrying here and there to look after the formation of the great column. And it was no light task. Early there began to arrive many hundreds of the veterans, some in organizations, and others singly. All had questions to ask. They wanted to know where their place of formation was, and as there was more or less confusion many were unable to find the place they were in search of. But unlimited credit must be given to General Canham and his assistants. Not only did they get the column started at the proper time, but it was kept moving with a celerity never before known at an event of a similar nature. The following is a roster of General Canham's staff and staff:
